The Newport Mercury

—PUBLISHED BY—
JOHN P. SANBORN,
122 THAMES STREET,
NEWPORT, R. I.

THE NEWPORT MERCURY was established in June, 1758, and is now in its one hundred and thirty-fifth year. It is the oldest newspaper in the United States, and with less than half a dozen exceptions, the oldest printed in the English language. It is a large quarto weekly of fifty columns, filled with interesting reading—editorial, State, local and general news, well selected miscellany and valuable farmers' and household departments. It reaches so many households in this and other States, the limited space given to advertising is very valuable to business men.

Local Matters.

The Sanitary Inspection.

The medical board of health acted promptly upon the resolution passed last week by the board of aldermen and at once adopted a thorough system of inspection of the entire city.

A corps of five inspectors, including two plumbers and one mason, was selected and at once set to work. Each inspector is given a certain section to inspect and provided with a large book in which to record the ownership, occupancy and condition of every place visited and each has to report to the executive officer of the board at the close of each day.

It is estimated that there are about 4,500 habitations within the city limits and up to Thursday night more than 1,000 had been inspected and their sanitary condition reported to the board.

The inspectors report that they are courteously received and given every opportunity to conduct their work wherever they go, and that the owners and occupants of places found defective seem disposed to rectify the evils in accordance with the directions given by the inspectors.

It is sincerely hoped and really believed that no cholera will come to Newport, but whether it does or not the inspection as now being conducted by the board of health is sure to prove an excellent thing. The sanitary condition of the city is sure to be much improved by it, and the reports of the inspectors, which will be the property of the board, will be an important means of reference in future cases of complaint.

The inspectors are Messrs. A. A. Chappell, Richard I. Steele, George D. Lewis, George M. Plummer and Mr. J. Murphy.

The President's Prompt Action.

President Harrison has sent a telegram to the Secretary of the Treasury saying that the Attorney General had sent him an opinion to the effect that he had full power, under the law, to prevent the landing in this country of all immigrants coming from ports infected with cholera or any other contagious disease. He suggested that the Secretary convey this information to the various trans-Atlantic ship companies, with an official notice that unless they acted in strict accordance therewith the President would issue an executive order prohibiting entirely all immigration from infected ports.

Daniel Watson has sold the beautiful and extensive tract of land known as the "Green Hill Farm" situated in South Kingstown, Washington county, having a bold frontage of a quarter of a mile on the Atlantic ocean with a fine sandy beach, and containing about four hundred and twenty acres, to Mr. Edmund W. Davis, of Providence. Mr. Davis was also the purchaser of the Bateman property on Brenton's Point, in February last.

An Italian bark passed up the bay yesterday about noon, apparently bound for Providence. Notice of her approach was received here some time before she was in sight and the authorities were ready for her had she shown any disposition to stop. She had evidently received her pilot at Black Island.

Schooner B. A. Van Brunt was run down and sunk off Fall River Sunday morning by Old Colony steamers Pilgrim and Providence during a dense fog. Both steamers were more or less injured.

Miss Annie Stephenson Gless, sister of Mr. Henry Gless of Newport and New York, was married in London last week to Capt. Charles H. I. Baker, of the British Army, a son of the late Admiral Baker.

This has been an exceedingly busy week at the Old Colony Company's Newport docks.

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST CHOLERA.

Important Meeting of Medical Men and Laymen.

There was a largely attended informal meeting of members of the Board of Aldermen, Board of Health, Newport Sanitary Association and prominent citizens at the City Hall Thursday evening for a general discussion of the cholera question.

Mayor Honey presided and opened the meeting by reading a series of resolutions passed that afternoon by the Sanitary Protection Society, asking that the Fall River line boats be required to carry a surgeon; that measures be taken to prevent an overflow of the sewers; that a hospital be built; that a large deposit of sewage off Briggs's wharf be removed; that the sewer outlet be repaired. The various questions involved in these resolutions were discussed at considerable length, that of a temporary hospital being considered the most important, and, in its location, the most difficult.

Rose Island, which had been tendered the city by the War Department, was pronounced impracticable by the medical men, and all the numerous other places, which could be suggested, were either shown to be unworkable or met with an opposition that it would be next to impossible to overcome.

The place which, for location and surroundings, met with the approval of the medical profession and of the citizens generally, was the Newport Hospital land near Sachuest beach. But Health Officer Peckham of Middletown seemed to kill this project by informing the meeting that his town would, he thought, oppose the locating of a pest house within its borders with all the law it could command.

Finally, after nearly two hours had been consumed without apparently being any nearer a solution of the question than at the opening, Rev. Father Coyle stated that there was a place on Miantonomi Hill, known as Eagle Creek, that belonged to Bishop Harkins, which the city could have. He said that the Bishop had not given him any authority to make this offer, but that, knowing the man and knowing him to practice what he preached, he did not hesitate to offer in his name the use of this property, at least for the care of the sick and the suffering if it was needed. This offer was received with applause and the meeting soon after adjourned.

Mr. A. O'D. Taylor had previously announced to the meeting that he had in his hands for sale the property on Coddington Point belonging to the late E. S. Philbrick, of Boston, which he thought would be a good location and which, if the city desired to purchase it, he would sell at $20,000, or as much less as possible, and give the city the benefit of his commission on the sale. The location of this property seemed to meet with general approval and when the meeting adjourned it was with the feeling that a place for the hospital had been secured, as, if Bishop Harkins' generous offer were not accepted the Philbrick property could be purchased.

A meeting of the Board of Aldermen immediately followed the informal meeting, and after the matter had been discussed in detail with the members of the Medical Board of Health, a resolution was unanimously passed conferring upon the Medical Board of Health, for the time being, all the powers vested in the Board of Aldermen, and at 10:30 this meeting also adjourned.

The speakers at the informal meeting included Dr. H. E. Turner, Dr. E. S. F. Arnold, Dr. Segfried, Dr. H. R. Storer, Dr. Ercroft, Professor Munroe, Mr. C. E. Hammett, Mr. A. O'D. Taylor, Mr. J. D. Davis, Mr. J. T. Burdick, Mr. John H. Cozzens, Rev. Father Coyle, Alderman Waters and others.

School Board Meeting.

The public school board held its regular monthly meeting Monday evening. Col. Sheffield, the chairman, presided, and there were also present Messrs. Nathan Barker, Cozzens, Horton, King, Sherman, Langley, Clarke, Plummer, Perry, and Dr. C. F. Barker. The committee on Teachers reported, recommending the employment of assistant teachers as follows: One in the First Grammar grade, three in the Fourth Grammar grade and three in the First Primary grade. Miss Peabody and Miss Potoka were granted leaves of absence on account of illness.

There were no reports from the Finance, Text Books or Industrial Schools committees.

Superintendent Baker reported the whole number of pupils enrolled Sept. 9, as 1,820; number belonging, 1,700; number attending, 1,730; the percentage being 95.6. Last year at the corresponding time, the number enrolled was 1,750; number belonging, 1,700; the number attending 1,703. Mr. Baker reported the number attending Rogers High School as 133, which he said was the largest in the history of the school, and only seven of this number are non-residents.

Several of our prominent cottagers contemplate spending the winter in Newport.

Citizens' Indignation Meeting.

There was a large and representative gathering of citizens at Republican headquarters, corner of Thames and Church streets, Monday evening. The meeting was for the purpose of considering the situation in which the electors of the city, irrespective of party, had been placed by the mayor and board of aldermen in neglecting to fix times and places for holding ward meetings on Wednesday, the 11th, the day fixed by law for holding the annual municipal election. The call for the meeting, although issued by the Republican City Committee, was made through the public press and addressed to all persons opposed to the methods practiced by the present board of aldermen. It was, therefore, not a political meeting, in the general acceptance of the meaning of the word, and many of the participants were men seldom or never seen at ward caucuses or like gatherings.

Rev. F. F. Emerson, pastor of the United Congregational church, presided. Mr. T. A. Spencer acting as secretary, and addresses were made by Rev. Mr. Emerson, ex-Alderman Wm. O. Greene, Mr. A. C. Titus, Mr. J. P. Sanborn, Rev. H. B. Gady, pastor of the Thames street M. E. Church, and Col. F. G. Harris, after which the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the citizens of Newport, irrespective of party, in mass meeting assembled to consider the conduct of the mayor and aldermen in neglecting to arrange the legal details necessary for the holding of the municipal election, are of the opinion that, in view of the plain provisions of law and the experience of the legislature, no such neglect was wilful, was intended to serve party purposes, and calculated to bring law and authority into contempt.

Resolved, That in view of these facts and believing that the most prompt and effective relief can be obtained through the agency of the general assembly, we hereby petition the Hon. the Governor, Hon. the Speaker of the House of Representatives, Hon. the President of the Senate of the State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, to convene a special session of the legislature, in order that due provision may be made for a municipal election and that any possible danger of a lapse as the Presidential election may be avoided.

Resolved, That a committee consisting of seven citizens, to be named by the chair, be appointed to present these resolutions to his Excellency, the Governor, with such information as will enable him to take the necessary steps to procure the prayer for relief. The committee of the resolution was then appointed by the chair as follows and given power to fill vacancies: Messrs. A. C. Titus, Louis L. Lorillard, Anthony S. Sherman, Henry Redgw. Charles H. Hammett, David T. Phillips and Addison Thomas.

Several of the gentlemen named were unable to serve and the committee, composed of Rev. F. F. Emerson and Messrs. A. C. Titus, C. E. Hammett, D. T. Phillips and T. T. Pitman, went to Providence Tuesday afternoon and laid the matter before Governor Brown and Attorney General Burbank. The Governor received the committee cordially and promised to give the object of their visit careful consideration. His reply has not yet been received, but when it is, it is confidently expected to be in accordance with the committee's wishes and that a special session of the General Assembly will be called as soon as practicable.

A Tin Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Walton Titus, formerly of this city, celebrated the tenth anniversary of their marriage Tuesday evening at their home in Lynn, and according to the Lynn Daily Item, which gives it a half-column notice, it must have been a most enjoyable affair. The invitations issued were neatly engraved cards enclosed in a plate of tin, and a tin box containing a piece of the original wedding cake was presented to each guest by the hostess as a souvenir. The happy couple received a host of appropriate and costly presents in both tin and silver.

The guests present represented many relatives and friends from all parts of New England.

On and after Monday next the Continental Steamboat Co. will return to their winter time table. There will be but one boat a day leaving here at 8 A. M. and returning to Providence at 4 P. M. Thursday next, Sept. 22, will be Governor's Day at the State Fair, when the boat will leave Providence at 5 P. M. instead of 4 P. M.

The third annual race meeting of the Newport County Hunt was held at Aquidneck Park, yesterday, and was a very enjoyable and successful affair. The weather was pleasant, the attendance large, and the racing excellent.

Hon. Wm. P. Sheffield, of this city, was the counsel for plaintiff in the case of Raymond R. Whipple, of Natick, against the city of Providence, which has just been decided in favor of the plaintiff for $10,000.

Captain Waters, of this city, has received the contract for raising four-masted schooner B. A. Van Brunt, at Fall River, he being the lowest of five bidders, and will begin work as soon as possible.

Steamer Herman S. Caswell will discontinue her trips between Newport and Narragansett Pier, for the season of 1892, this afternoon, making her last trip from Newport at 5:10.

Mr. Thomas Dunn and family have

Going to G. A. M. Encampment.

Charles E. Lawton Post will start tomorrow night for Washington to attend the grand encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. The post expects to take about 40 of its own members, and General G. K. Warren Post, having decided not to attend as a post, several of its members are expected to accompany them. Two or three members of Gen. Warren Post will go independently.

Mr. John T. Delano, of G. E. Lawton Post, started last night, accompanied by his family, but will join the post upon its arrival in Washington. Mr. Delano and his family expect to be absent ten days or a fortnight and will visit Harper's Ferry, Antietam, Gettysburg and other places of historic interest.

H. A. Heath & Co.'s Sale.

The auction sale of H. A. Heath & Co.'s large and varied stock of bric-a-brac, watches, clocks, jewelry, etc., which has attracted so much attention during the past week, will be continued several days longer. The store has been crowded with purchasers during the hours of sale, both afternoon and evening, and many of our citizens are boasting of the great bargains they have made. Well, nobody can expect to get standard retail prices for goods sold under the hammer, but if all the stories we hear are true, the Messrs. Heath & Co. are disposing of their elegant stock at a tremendous sacrifice, and their patrons are reaping a harvest.

Poetry.

Who Knows?

BY DAVID BANKS RICHARDS.

Who knows we have not lived before
In form that is not yet defined
If death is not the open door
Through which we pass to life again
The fruitless seed beneath the sod
In infant and young man may die;
But by the eternal law of God
It is not quickened till it dies.

The leaves that tremble on the tree
Fall from the oak of autumn's storm;
But by the eternal law of God
It is not quickened till it dies.

As currents of the surging sea
From undimmed sources flow,
So what we were and yet may be
In this brief life is not unknown.

Break through the doorway of our dreams,
Break through the doorway of our dreams,
And some familiar face appears.

A gentle spirit, soft and white,
Auntie's change from death to life,
And smiling eyes and loving smile
Recall some former scene of earth.

And thus unconscious of the love
The mystic link that love creates,
Perhaps we see our own who die
In newer forms and other states.

Perhaps with every cycle passed
In all the ages yet to be,
Our loved will come to us at last,
As parted waters find the sea.

Not wholly dead as they were seen
When death unbarred their robes of clay;
And souls that cannot pass away.

To Christ he cried to quell Death's deafening
Scream by the storm to Death's own chariot
To Christ he cried for glimpse of grace or
When, hovering o'er the calm, Death watched
His measure.

And when he allowed the man, now dazed with pleasure,
Faint, new world glittering starlike on the sea.

"I trust that by the help of Christ," said he,
I presently shall light on golden treasure.

What treasure found he? Chances and pains
And sorrows.

Yes, all the wealth those noble seekers find
Where footfalls mark the noise of mankind
Twas his to lead a life: 'Twas Man's to be.

'Twas his to make, but not to share, the horror
Who in Love's memory lives this morn enriched.

Selected Tale.

A TALE OF TURGHUELA.

"Turghuela, Turghuela? That's where Maimie Rhodes lives; and that settles the question. I'll go and chance it."

So Geoffrey Dasset wrote off there and then to the colonial office, accepting the magnificent offer of the post of government medical officer in Turghuela at a salary of £200 a year.

It would surely be only the light of Maimie Rhodes' eyes that could attract a man from England to Turghuela, seeing what a remote, unknown scrap of a place it is, compared with which the other West Indian islands are great oases. In fact, it is so small that it is not mentioned by name in "Whitaker," nor is it otherwise indicated on a map than by a dot, surrounded by dots equally nameless, but all bearing the general title of "The Virgin Islands."

For fertile loveliness it is a garden of Eden. Its miniature ranges of mountains are wooded up to the top with tamarisks, cactuses, silk cotton trees and papaya, whose yellow blossoms splash the sides in broad patches of gold. The air is thick with the scent of the bananae, custard apples, sour saps, and mangoes, that grow round the little homesteads; and the fields of tall, green cane, on the one sugar estate the island boasts of, rustle pleasantly in the cool sea breeze. The people too, seem more contented and happy, the few whites in their clean drill suits and straw hats, the negro women with stately figures set off by the erect poise of their heads tied round with handkerchiefs of gaudy red and yellow, and the little nigger children running about with naked little bodies shining in the sun.

All of these things aroused Geoffrey Dasset's delight as he landed in Turghuela, and was shown round the place by the rice president of the island, a versatile gentleman combining the offices of stipendiary magistrate, harbor master, postmaster, registrar, commandant of police, and general dealer in home and colonial produce, who welcomed him with unostentatious effusion, and put his house, his servants, and his cattle at the service of the newcomer. Dasset was in such a whirl of new sensations that it was some time before he found an opportunity for enquiring after Miss Rhodes.

"Dear me!" exclaimed his new friend. "The idea of knowing any one here! I suppose you mean Maimie Rhodes that was. She's married now. You never heard of it? A man called Conway; lucky beggar. Came over here a year or two ago as overseer of Mount Pleasant, married Maimie, and on the death of her father, came into possession of the whole estate."

Dasset scarcely heard the latter part of this little speech. The blue faded from the sky, and the glory from the hills. Maimie married! A vague sense of the futility of things came over him, and he wished himself back in England. But in Turghuela he was, and in Turghuela he had to remain, and to learn the quiet ways of his new patients, and to forego with his spiritual colleague, Rev. Mr. Jones, who officiated in the tiniest little stone church covered all over with the bell apple vine, and to meet Maimie just as if nothing had ever passed between them, and to dine at her husband's table, and finally, to keep a stiff upper lip while working out like a man the lot he had apportioned unto himself.

A surprise even more disagreeable than his introduction to her husband, Maimie's meeting sometimes, says the proverb, and then earthquakes follow. There was no earthquake in this case at Turghuela, but the two men glared for a moment at each other, until Conway put out his hand, and with an assumption of rough geniality, said:

"Come, we must be bad friends henceforth. Let bygones be bygones."

And then Dasset had preferred to accept the olive branch proffered in the shape of the great sun-glazed hand, although he felt the ashes of an almost forgotten quarrel burst into flame within him.

Maimie received him with a glad welcome she hardly strove to hide. She was still the same sweet, unsophisticated little girl he had once known, telling him of the new life in England, in spite of a certain seriousness of maternity which seemed to him quaintly incongruous.

"What on earth made you come out to this heaven forsaken place?" she asked one day. He had been dining at Mr. Pleasant, and it being crop time, Conway had rushed off to the works, leaving the two alone on the veranda.

"I don't think it is that," he replied, lazily enjoying the moonlight and the scent of the orange blossoms in the garden. "I had no idea that Turghuela was such a paradise—as far as God made it."

He looked up quickly at her. Her head was turned aside in critical contemplation of a twig of jasmine she was twisting. Still, he could not tell her the exact truth.

"What makes men do silly things?"

"You are as bad as a woman. You attack side issues instead of coming to the point. I asked you why you came out."

"I have lived many years since then, I am an old married woman now." And then, after a pause: "Why did you never write to me? You broke up so suddenly, without letting me know? One Sunday you were full of plans for enjoying your visit, and the next, when I had toiled ten miles to see you, learnt that you had sailed away on Wednesday."

"I know," she said, rising suddenly, and throwing away the jasmine stalk. "It was a mistake. I must go and see what Maimie is doing with that coffee."

"It was a mistake." That was all Maimie said. Dasset walked homeward very thoughtful, not without certain misgivings, which the sound of Conway's voice and that of a woman, raised suddenly in angry altercation some yards in front of him on the road, did not allay.

"You lie, you black beast," said Conway, and his tone broke harshly upon the moonlight stillness.

"Whether I'm black or whether I'm mulatto, don't make any difference. That's what people don't good enough to pull jiggers out of black people's feet. O me father! Mr. Conway, you're real bad. When you're not drinking rum, you're hanging around respectable people's daughters, and poor Miss Maimie up yonder treated like a dog."

"Hold your tongue," said Conway, savagely. "Here's $5."

"Not for $5 nor for $50. You can keep your dirty dollars," replied the indignant mulatto, and then she paused as Dasset passed by.

The moonlight was too strong for the two men to pretend not to recognize each other. They exchanged a curt good night, and Dasset went on his way.

This scrap of conversation confirmed in his mind the vague rumors that were afloat in the island concerning Mr. Conway's domestic affairs.

"It is hard enough," he wrote to his sister in England, "to see the girl one cares for married to another man; but when this man has been known to me as a scamp, and shows himself to me as a drunkard, and a womanizer, and a scoundrel, and Maimie—well, she's a fool. Don't be afraid, sis. If I felt I could not trust myself, I should not write to you, or I should come home. But I must stay here. A man can't escape his responsibilities by hiding his head from them, ostrich fashion."

So Dasset resolved to abide in Turghuela, and see the play played out. Meanwhile, he led an easy, pleasant life, as far as material pleasures were concerned. He doctored the lazy, good-natured negroes to their hearts' content, and gained their sincere esteem as much by his kindness as by the unpromising potency of his medicines; and in his leisure hours idled the time away, bathing in the many colored sea, playing strange Arcadian tennis on the pebbles, burnt-up patch of field, adjoining the parsonage, or chatting in the veranda while the tropical noonday sun was blazing. He saw as little as he possibly could of Conway, who, on his side, tried to effect his policy of conciliation. But it is not easy to avoid meeting one's neighbor in Turghuela, and Dasset saw more of him and of Maimie than was good for his peace of mind. He noticed, too, that Maimie was beginning to look unhappy, and sometimes she would catch a queer, furtive glance she directed at her husband, and worse than all—he saw an unmistakable light in her gray eyes when Conway had freed them of his presence. Once he vaguely hinted at returning to England. She looked at him half-frightened, and laid her hand upon his arm in impulsive fashion.

"You must not go yet, Conway. You must stay, and help me as a doctor."

One morning, about a week after this he rode up to Mt. Pleasant, to see Conway professionally. Rum and sodas and unlimited Bass had affected his liver, and Dasset went to cure it, much against his will. He had scarcely bled his pony up to the gate post, when Maimie, with great frightened eyes, and a white face, rushed out upon the veranda, followed by her husband. He had evidently been drinking; his eyes were blood-shot, and he carried a thick riding-whip in his hand. Dasset sprang up the steps, with fury in his heart.

"You brute!" he shouted, as, with a little choking sob, Maimie ran to him for protection, and clung to his arm.

"Stand back, or by Heaven I'll kill you!" cried Conway, brandishing his whip. "I'll kill the two of you! You and that—"

Dasset shook himself free of Maimie, and dashed his fist full in the speaker's face. Conway reeled, fell, and struck his head against the lintel, and lay stunned.

"He's dead!"

"Oh, no, he isn't. Maimie, darling, how did this happen?" asked Dasset, losing his self-control.

"He was quarrelled because I said you had forbidden him to drink, and then—Oh, my love! my love! help me!"

And she fell sobbing into his arms.

"Come Maimie, this won't do," he said, with kind roughness. "Get your hat at once, and go to Mrs. Jones. That's the only thing to be done for the present. I'll stay and look after him."

That night Maimie slept at the parsonage, while her husband remained a sudden invalid at Mt. Pleasant.

Early the next morning Dasset was summoned by a little black boy.

"Please, sir, Mr. Conway's very sick, and old Joe thinks it is yellow fever."

There was no doubt of it. The ghastly yellow face, the delirious eyes, and the raging fever told their own tale. Dasset made a few hurried necessary arrangements in the sick room, sent one messenger off to the chemist's and another with a note to Mrs. Jones, telling her briefly what had occurred and peremptorily forbidding her to come near the house.

He saw at once that it was a bad case—almost hopeless. Still his professional pride was aroused, and he intended to combat the disease desperately. He was pouring a draught of quinine down the patient's throat, when the door opened, and Maimie came into the room.

"Go away, Maimie! go at once! I'll send you news of him," he said, rather impetuously.

Maimie took off her hat and threw it on a chair.

"He is my husband, and I am come to nurse him."

"It's madness. You are so strong. You will be rushing into certain death."

"And you?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"It's a doctor's duty," he said.

"So it is a wife's. I am staying. Just tell me what you want done, and I'll do it."

Dasset could not gainsay her. He shrugged his shoulders again in token of reluctant submission.

Hour after hour, during that awful illness, they watched together by the sick man's bed, trying all that science and unerring care could do to win him back to life. In his delirium he muttered things that made Dasset's blood boil, and Maimie's face grow white and set. The brute across her cheek, where the whip had cut her, still remained. Dasset was seized with a terrible temptation to let him die there and then. It was only too easy, and it could hardly be called murder. It seemed monstrous injustice that this drunken ruffian should live to bar his way and Maimie's to happiness. What if he told her all he knew—that Conway was a fellow medical student of his; that he had swindled him out of a large sum of money; that he had turned into an idle turf leaver, who lived upon the hard-earned salary of a provision storekeeper? In his delirium Conway called his wife "Florence" and asked her for money, and cursed her bitterly. And Maimie listened and half-guessed the miserable truth. But Dasset scarcely spoke to her, save in whispered monosyllables, giving her directions. They both sat silent, watching the man they both hated, whose death, at their hearts, they were both longing for, and yet, at the risk of their own lives, were striving to avert.

An old negro woman, Maimie's nurse—faithful in all things, as negroes are—shared the night watch with them.

At dawn, Dasset going out to breathe fresh air, was surprised at seeing a strange thing hanging by the door. It was an old bottle filled with rage and straw, and from the mouth stuck three crows' feathers.

"What on earth is this?" he said aloud to himself.

"That is oshah," replied Maimie, who had crept out behind him. "Have you never heard of it? It is a spell to bring death into the house. The negroes hate him."

When the fatal black-vomit came, Dasset muttered to himself: "It is all over."

"Not yet, there is still hope," said Maimie, in a low voice.

For two hours Conway hovered between life and death, vitality only kept in him by supreme, unrelaxing devotion. He was no longer a man in Dasset's eyes, but a case which he watched with breathless interest. At length the crisis passed, the fever abated, and Conway fell into a calm sleep.

"We have saved his life," said Dasset, with a deep breath.

Although the worst was over, Conway required for days the most constant care that Dasset and Maimie could give him. He lay languid and exhausted, all but unconscious of their presence. And this was their hardest trial. It was comparatively easy to put self in the background, during the disease; not so to continue watchful and tender after the crisis had come. Still they came triumphantly out of the ordeal, each strengthened in love and respect for the other.

One day they were walking by the window of the sick room, when they were startled by seeing Conway rise from bed and point terror-stricken to the door. It was the first sign of vitality he had shown.

"Who is that woman? How did she get here?"

And then a voice was heard from the hall:

"I don't care whether Mr. Conway is ill or not. Just tell him that his wife, Mrs. Conway, wishes to speak with him."

"Flossie! My wife!" cried Conway. "Do you mean to say you married that woman you sponged on in England?" cried Dasset, fiercely.

The woman's voice outside was barely audible. Conway fell back exhausted on his pillow.

"Yes," he gasped. "The game's up. Why didn't you let me die? I think I am dying now—Maimie!"

He struggled to say more, but the words stuck in his throat. He drew two or three spasmodic breaths, and then raised himself convulsively and fell back, dead. He had died of "oshah."

"At my dear Miss Priscilla's" said a negro woman, about two months after this, to a friend who was doing her the kindly office of plaiting her hair, as they sat at the threshold of a house.

"It was the oshah, but when you pour oshah over a door something's bound to happen."

"What a wife come to stand him?" inquired "Miss" Priscilla.

"Well, the Reverend said as how it was judgment of the good God; but I think it was the oshah and the mouth that war put upon him ever since he came that brought his wife out to D'bados play-acting."

"What's that, Miss Sophy?"

"Play-acting," replied Miss Sophy, who had seen the world, like if you and white people on a platform, and the folks all laugh."

"I see," said Miss Priscilla.

"And then oshah must have told her he was here, and so she came. All my dear Miss Priscilla, he was real wicked. The deebble got him now by the foot. And now Miss Maimie's going to be married, and she's going away from Turghuela, and that Mt. Pleasant is to be sold. I wish we could put oshah on her and make her stay, but that's something it won't do, my dear child. But I'll go to old Joe and make the old nigger put up a great big oshah when Miss Maimie and Dr. Dasset get married for them to have lots of pretty children. Thank you, Miss Priscilla, ain't been able to get my own to do my hair for the last three months."

A young man who believes in self-improvement, having recently married, suggested to his wife that they should argue some questions frankly and fully every morning, in order to learn more of each other. The first question happened to be "Whether a woman without a hat, and who took the affirmative, and who he had just seen he had climbed up into the hay loft and was pulling the ladder after him."—[Auburn News and Bulletin.]

A mosquito's bill is an elaborate contrivance, and consists of two sharp saws and a lance inclosed in a sheath, which is also employed as a pump. The saws are bony, but flexible, and the teeth are near the tip, which is pointed. This is perhaps the most perfect instrument known in the world of minute things. It is first thrust into the flesh, and the opening enlarged by the saws, which play beside it until the sheath can be inserted. The sawing is what causes irritation when a mosquito is biting.

Relief from Sick Headache, Dizziness, Stomach, Distension, Pain in the Side, guaranteed to those using Carter's Little Liver Pills. These complaints are nearly always caused by liver and stomach troubles. Restore these organs to their proper functions and the trouble ceases. Carter's Little Liver Pills will do this every time. Price 25 cents.

He who chases two hares will catch neither.

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

Advantage is a better soldier than rashness.

Always avoid harsh purgative pills. They first make you sick and then leave you constipated. Carter's Little Liver Pills regulate the bowels and make you well. Dose, one pill.

A late spring is often followed by an early harvest.

All cases of tooth or lame back, backache, rheumatism, will find relief by wearing one of Carter's Smart Weel and Belladonna Backache Plasters.

In the flutter of excitement the flight of time is unheeded.

Sufferers from dyspepsia have only themselves to blame if they fail to test the wonderful curative qualities of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In purifying the blood, the stomach, and every organ of the body, and even the most abused stomach is so restored to healthy action.

The best thing one can do is to be content.

People who give Hodge's Sarsaparilla a fair trial realize its great merit and are glad to say a good word for it. Have you tried it?

No! I can be small when the purpose is great.

No person should travel without a box of Ayer's Pills. As a safe and speedy remedy for constipation and biliousness, they have no equal, and being perfectly sugar-coated, are pleasant to take, and retain their virtues.

Subsily wants to go back until they first look back.

Generation after generation have used and blessed Hodge's Sarsaparilla. Try it.

The blindest man are the ones who think they have no faults.

It is the true remedy for the natural foetal color-matter for the hair, and a medical basis for the skin, curing scurfiness, blotches, eruptions, and all such evils.

To be so long is longer is better than to be so long as a seven-shooter.

For Better or for Worse.

Friend, you have only been married a week and here I find you in tears.

Young Wife.—Yes, but my husband has been running for office, and I have been reading in the papers what an unmitigated scoundrel he is.

He (referring to music).—"Don't you think I'm slow and a little too soft?"

She (absently).—"Yes. But then you have wealth and position, and that counts for something."—[Life.]

Removal.

Division Among the Faithful.

Says the Woonsocket Reporter: The summary of the action in which Mayor Pond "let down" on Alderman Heffernan at the city council meeting Monday evening has caused quite a ripple in political circles. Several leading democrats interviewed uphold his honor, and say that it was a proper rebuke for offensive officiousness. The outcome will probably be to widen the breach for some time dividing the democratic factions in this city.

The Great Western of England will send an interesting relic to the fair in the "Lord of the Isles," an old locomotive that ran 180,000 miles without change of boiler. The Lord of the Isles is seven-foot gauge and was built for the Great Western in 1857. At the first Crystal Palace Exposition at London in that year it was exhibited as the most wonderful achievement of the century. Sir Daniel Gooch designed the locomotive and got a gold medal. It was run continuously until 1881.

It is now to be hoped that the name of John L. Sullivan will pass from public notice, even though that of a man of less brutal instincts shall take its place. If there must be a "championship" of the prize ring, let it rest with a man who has some regard for public decency, as Corbett certainly has. The battle, therefore, was not without its benefits.

TIVERTON.

AN ECCLESIASTICAL COUNCIL.—An ecclesiastical council convened at the Congregational church, Tiverton 4 Corners, Wednesday, Sept. 14th, at 2 p. m., to consider the subject of terminating the pastoral relation of the Rev. Donald Brown. The council was organized by the choice of the Rev. L. S. Woodworth of Providence as moderator, the Rev. Thomas F. Morris of Westport as scribe. The churches invited were represented as follows: 1st Congregational church, Fall River, Mr. T. M. Grew,

Deputy; Central Church, Fall River, Rev. W. W. Jubb, Pastor; Little Congregational church, Rev. James Lade, pastor; Deacon, George W. Church, Deputy; Western Congregational Church, Rev. Thomas F. Morris, pastor; Capt. A. J. Mosher, Deputy; and Rev. L. S. Woodworth, State Missionary. The pastor's letter of resignation was read, also the action of the church in accepting the same. Further statements were made by the Rev. W. W. Jubb, the retiring pastor and Deacon Peleg D. Humphrey. It was then unanimously voted that the pastoral relation be terminated in accordance with the wish of the pastor and people. The Rev. L. S. Woodworth and Rev. W. W. Jubb were appointed a committee to prepare and submit this result in an appropriate manner. The committee reported the following resolutions which were adopted.

In coming to this result, the council are gratified in being able to testify to the earnest work which Mr. Brown has done, and to the good life which he has lived among the people, they therefore commend him to the confidence of the churches, as in their judgment, an honest, faithful and useful minister of the Gospel, who carries with him their tender sympathies and earnest prayers for his future prosperity in the work of the Lord, wherever providence may assign his labors. Voted the Council adjourn sine die.

The school in district No. 2 closed Wednesday, scarlet fever having broken out in the neighborhood. The funeral service of the late Oliver Wilcox took place Saturday, the 10th inst., at 1 p. m., at the Congregational church, the Rev. G. B. Cutler officiating. A poem appropriate to the occasion. The interment was at Hillside cemetery, adjoining the church. Captain George Gray, Messrs. Otis A. Gray, John G. Cory and Pardon Cory acting as pall bearers. Mr. Wilcox was born March 24th, 1804 and was the third oldest man in town. Messrs. Philip W. Lake and Elijah Willey having been born in the year 1800.

The Rev. Mr. Porter, of Newport, will preach at the Berkeley chapel Sunday afternoon at 4:30.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.

But Faint Hopes of Mrs. Harrison's Recovery from Her Sickness.

LOON LAKE, N. Y., Sept. 16.—An examination of Mrs. Harrison's condition shows that the progress of the disease which is slowly but surely sapping her vitality has been temporarily arrested. In other words there has been perceptible increase in the effusion of fluid in the chest cavity during the past twenty-four hours, and the physicians are encouraged to the belief that there has been a natural absorption. Another feature of the case that gives encouragement to the physicians is that Mrs. Harrison was more restless than usual during the night, a condition indicating to them that she still possessed considerable nervous force and has not yet reached a state of complete exhaustion or coma.

The two operations that she has undergone recently have affected her less than was feared, as it was not supposed that she had such good recuperative powers. Within a few days some people here who think the distinguished invalid has a chance of recovery, the majority are inclined to the belief that she will leave this place alive. The president and the members of his household pretend to be encouraged at Mrs. Harrison's condition, but it is painfully evident to their intimate friends that they have little or no hope of her complete recovery.

The physicians no longer conceal their real anxiety at the situation, and practically admit that the case has gone beyond the point where medical or human skill can further avail. In the words of one of the physicians: "While there's life there's hope, but it is a rare exception when a person is affected with consumption, like Mrs. Harrison now is, recovers from the disease."

THE KITE IS SAFE.

The Peary Party, with One Exception Has Arrived at St. John's, N. F. PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—A special dispatch to The Ledger from St. John's, N. F., says: The kite has arrived here from North Greenland, whence it sailed on Aug. 24. On board are the entire Peary relief expedition in good health, with Lieutenant and Mrs. Peary and party, except John M. Vorhoff, who it is believed lost his life shortly after the return of Peary from the inland ice by falling into the crevasse of a glacier at the head of Roberts Sound bay, a body of water adjoining McCormick bay, while on an expedition of his own to a neighboring Eskimo settlement.

Notwithstanding a persistent search for several days, Mr. Vorhoff's body was not found. There were abundant traces of his having gone on the glacier and none of his having crossed it. John M. Vorhoff came from Louisville, and was about 25 years old. He had been a student at Yale. He had charge of the mineralogical and mathematical affairs of the expedition.

With the exception of this casualty the two expeditions have been eminently successful. Mr. Peary carried out his plans, fully and made a great inland journey of 1500 miles with his party, and through the members of his party who remained at McCormick bay he has made a rich collection of flora, fauna and geology of North Greenland, besides which he has demonstrated the ease and comfort with which a winter can be spent in the Arctic regions.

The relief expedition has been equally fortunate. Throughout the voyage no serious mishaps occurred and the collections made are probably unprecedented.

THE CATTLE MARKETS.

| Canada..... | 1,000 | 500 | 10,000 |
| Total..... | 8,000 | 4,000 | 81,000 |

Last week's market was brought in very fat condition, and were sold for slaughter. Southern and eastern cattle were in demand, but very few on the market, and the quality not at all extra. None were sold for export. The sales were merely nominal and no quotations are given.

Milk cows and springers.—The sales were about as last week and the demand limited. The drovers only bring to the market what few cows they are practically forced to buy while trading in the country. They claim that the trading here is so slight that they decline to take up the room in the cage that should be taken up by more marketable stock.

Veal calves.—The receipts were about as last week, but the demand was stronger, even at an advance of 10c. The range is from 5c to 10c for prime veal.

Spring and lamb.—The drop of 10c to 15c in consequence of the increase in the receipts. The quality of sheep received was excellent, but lambs were poor. The market was cleared before the noon hour despite the number.

Western beef cattle.—This only sales noted were five head of cattle from 110 to 115 lbs per hundred, at 10c per lb.

Boston Produce Market—Sept. 16. FLOUR.—The market is quiet, with the exception that some of the more noted concerns are having a good trade in a moving flour product, which product has been a good deal increased over a year ago. Quotations are still unchanged, with prices the lowest on record.

POTATOES.—Extra on white, with sweets a little lower. Native in barrels, 18c; in bulk, 16c. Boston, 18c; New Hampshire, 18c; and Lehigh, 18c; New York and Vermont white stars and brands, 18c; Jersey double head sweets, 18c; Jersey balls, 18c; Virginia, 18c.

MUTTON AND LAMB.—Dull and easier. Veals are dull at slightly lower prices. Choice to fancy spring lambs, 10c to 12c, as to quality, common to good, 8c to 10c. Chicago mutton, 12c to 14c. Spring lambs, 10c to 12c. Heavy, 12c to 14c. Choice eastern veals, 10c to 12c. Common to good, 8c to 10c. Brightons and fancy, 10c to 12c.

CATTLE.—Very firm, with the advance fully sustained. Choice northern veals, 10c to 12c; fair to good, 8c to 10c; western choice, 10c to 12c. Jersey double head sweets, 18c; Jersey balls, 18c; Virginia, 18c.

Admiral Walker, on board the Chitogo, has been entrusted with a mission of the greatest importance. He will have four warships under him. Though he goes with royal instructions to Venezuela, it is understood that he "was directed to pursue a vigorous course in dealing with the situation, especially in connection with foreign aggression." It is thought that his mission to La Guayra with his squadron will be to proffer the friendly intervention of the United States to the Venezuelan authorities for the purpose of preventing the final absorption of Venezuela by Great Britain, and further to secure the restoration of the status quo as to the boundaries as it existed prior to 1877, and to obtain consent for submitting to arbitration the question of title of the territory in dispute. Among the advantages which Great Britain has endeavored to secure by taking possession in the port of Maricao, at the mouth of the Orinoco, which would give Great Britain the command of the river.
